DAY 1

TRAINER GUIDE FOR ROLEPLAY SESSIONS

INSTRUCTIONS:

These roleplays are your chance to see how your new team member handles real situations. Please use the examples provided in this document as your guide.

BEFORE YOU START:

- Make sure you have a quiet spot where you won't be interrupted.
- Review the script for the specific scenario you are about to practice.

DURING THE ROLEPLAY:

- Watch for these key behaviors: Pay close attention to how they greet the customer, their tone of voice, and how they show they are listening.
- Stay in character: Act as the customer described in the example.
- Encourage them: If they make a mistake, it's okay! Use it as a learning moment.

AFTER THE ROLEPLAY:

- Give them clear feedback on what they did well and one thing they can try differently next time.
- Be kind and supportive. Your goal is to help them feel confident before they start working with real customers.

ROLEPLAY SCENARIOS

SCENARIO 1: The "I'm in a Hurry" Walk-In

Trainer Prompt: "I'm a customer who just walked in. I look at my watch, sigh loudly, and tap my foot. I walk up to the counter and say, 'Look, I only have a fifteen-minute lunch break. Can I just grab a slice or something fast?'"

Observe:

- Does the new hire make eye contact?
- Do they sound panicked or calm?
- Do they offer a friendly greeting before answering, or just blurt out an answer? (Even if the answer is just, "I'm so sorry, we don't sell pizza by the slice, but let me grab someone who can tell you our fastest options!")

SCENARIO 2: The Mumbled Phone Call

Trainer Prompt: "I'm calling the store, but I have you on speakerphone while my dog is barking in the background, and I'm talking really fast. 'Yeah hi I need a large pepperoni and can you make sure it gets here in like twenty minutes?'"

Observe:

- Does the new hire use the proper phone greeting?
- Do they maintain a professional tone when asking the customer to repeat themselves, or do they get frustrated?

NOTES:

ROLEPLAY SCENARIOS

SCENARIO 3: The "Wrong Store" Confession

Trainer Prompt: "I walk in to pick up my order. You ask for my name, and I say 'Smith.' You look (pretend) and tell me you don't have an order for Smith. I show you my phone receipt, and you realize I ordered from the Domino's on the other side of town."

Observe:

- Empathy and tone. Does the new hire act annoyed that the customer made a mistake, or do they use a friendly, helpful tone to explain the mix-up? ("Oh, it looks like this order went to our Main Street location! I can call them for you, or we can make it here, but it will take a few minutes.")

SCENARIO 4: The Lifeline Test

Trainer Prompt: Ask a highly specific, unfair question. "Hi, my kid has a severe gluten allergy but also can't have dairy. Can you guarantee the gluten-free crust hasn't touched the same cutting board as the regular pizza?"

Observe:

- Do they panic and guess? Or do they confidently and politely use the "I don't know" script? ("That is a great question. I am new and still learning our allergy protocols, so let me grab my manager to make absolutely sure I give you the right answer.")
